Early 2019 contact was made with CrossReach following an article in the CrossReach News highlighting the ongoing support for those in need of Mental Health services.

Morven is an award winning service, in Kilmarnock, serving its local community and the wider Ayrshire population through different groups.

The kirk session were keen to meet the need of their community having taken the time to understand how the local church could love and serve those in need.

From these early notes of interest, time has been taken to develop a plan which will see unused church premises once again occupied, providing a local, safe and secure space. The knowledge and skills of the CrossReach employees will come alongside the congregation and health professionals to put in place a service which will provide improved access to mental health support for those most in crisis.

Over the coming months look out for news on the CrossReach website, social media platforms and on the Irvine Old Parish Church website for updates.
